

Why a Brainwashed Child Should not be Given Credibility
(Please take note CPS and Lawyer for the Child)

Expecting a PA child to provide a believable, convincing, thoughtful, rational explanation of their enmity for and rejection of their targeted/alienated parent is like searching for that elusive needle in a haystack; watching grass grow; pushing the little train that couldn't; waiting for Gadot; discovering logic in Franz Kafka's The Trial. Examples of the ludicrous rationalizations expressed to me or to their parent by PA children to justify their total and absolute exclusion of their targeted/alienated parent from their lives include (but are scarcely limited to): her hairstyle is out of the 30's; he filed me away in his cabinet like I was an unpaid bill; he made me root for the Giants when he knows I like the Jets; she stalked me by watching me at my concert; he would bribe me with a Barbie Doll to see him; he insisted I go to Disney with him over my objections; he is not benefitting from anger management therapy; he violated my HIPAA rights by calling me; he kept taking me back to court so that I would visit with him; she keeps violating my constitutional right not to see her; he's so annoying by constantly telling me I'm alienated from him when I'm not alienated; he failed to make me brush my teeth and take baths; he broke into our home; she buys me clothes to run a guilt trip on me; you don't build a relationship over dinner; your sheets are too cold; you will abandon me like the prince did in Sleeping Beauty; you think you can buy me with expensive gifts; you cooked too much; I can't think of why I hate him but there must be a good reason or I would not feel this way; I know he must have beat me because my mom said he did; he is not exactly father of the year; she points her finger in a malevolent way; we can never count on her; she doesn't act like a family; he embarrassed me by asking to speak to the manager in the supermarket, and then he would not feed me when he made me carry all the heavy food home; the Addidas sneakers he bought me were too expensive; your punishments don't fit the crime, and that violates my 14th amendment rights; I read in the papers how you are trying to avoid child support; you tricked me when you bought me that iPad because you did not do it out of love; you're old fashioned; you fornicated with animals; you can't keep a man and have a normal life; you didn't do your wifely duties; you took dad to the cleaners; you deserved to be hit because you were always nagging.

Then there are the simple classics that are offered with no specific examples: she/he lies; she/he is annoying; she/he is embarrassing; she/he can't be trusted; she/he is fake, she/is boring.

Of course, there is the defiant explanation: Why must I have a reason?

And then there are the spurious, life altering accusations: those alleging child abuse and child sexual abuse.
